

Are you worthy of a better grade?

Now that we have discussed the question (Are you deserving/worthy of an education?) and the ways to approach your answer, I want you to start polishing up your work. What does “polishing up” look like?

Make sure you read all my comments. You don’t have to agree with all my suggestions. I am not trying to take your work and make it my own. But if it tells you to change “your” to “you’re,” because it’s a grammatically incorrect, you may want to do that. Also, see where you are not answering the question. As I suggested in class, go through each sentence, and ask yourself, does this sentence answer the question? When you write “I deserve or I am worthy of an education because I do well in school,” That alone does not answer the question.

As a BENEFIT or a CURSE, you can add to your work, if you wish. Explain your answer more but beware of going off topic or explaining yourself too much. If you stay with the same word count, that is fine, you will not lose credit.

Three pages vs. one paragraph is seen in the same light. Just be clear.

Good luck.

I enjoyed our writing conversations Friday. As a bonus, those of you that participated in the class discussion, got a couple of point added to your paper. I told you, I don’t like to hear myself speak! If you participated in class, which I believe almost all of you did, you will receive extra points!
